

What will you learn at the Women with Wings Leadership Seminar Jan. 17-19, 2020?

The seminar explores a menu of skill development opportunities and helps unearth and articulate your own wisdom in areas such as:

- Building leadership awareness, confidence, and presence
- Creating a personal leadership vision as an effective and inspired leader
- Unearthing and exploring in yourself the “female leadership paradox”
- Navigating challenges and gender biases particular to female leaders
- Cultivating emotional resilience along with the art and practice of just not taking things personally
- Exploring and enhancing your leadership language—the importance of words, the art of generative listening and asking compelling questions, empowering your message with congruency by aligning your body language with it, and learning to give and receive behavior-specific feedback to increase effectiveness and generate feelings of self-worth
- Effecting change and creating positive collective results by focusing your own intentions and other people’s attention
- Exploring your team leadership skills and ability to predict functioning developmental stages within groups to diagnose and troubleshoot issues to build high-performance teams
- Exploring the amazing power and impact of “structure determines behavior” in leadership
- Learning successful approaches to marketing and communications, along with promotion with integrity (including self-promotion)
- Learning to design and facilitate meetings that inspire and make the best use of everyone’s time
- Exploring the art of training and building leadership/management capacity in others
